

TO PRESENT JAMES' NAME TO G. O. P. CONVENTION TODAY

Sessions Are Reconvened To Choose A Presidential Nominee From 13 Candidates

BALLOTING TO START

Taft Popularity Appears To Be On The Rise, It Is Stated

By Robert Humphreys
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PHILADELPHIA, June 27—The Republican National Convention, having already sewed an "anti-war" label onto the party standard, reconvened today to choose a Presidential nominee from a field of 13 hopefuls headed by Ohio's Senator Taft, Thomas E. Dewey, Wendell Willkie and Senator Vandenberg of Michigan.

Before the actual balloting could get underway, however, six candidates remained to be placed in nomination, a formality disposed of last night in behalf of Taft, Dewey, Willkie and the New York State publisher Frank Gannett.

Stated to be formally nominated in short order today were Vandenberg, Hanford MacNider, Iowa's favorite son, Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Senator McNary of Oregon, Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, and Governor Harlan F. Bush of South Dakota.

Foregoing the hullabaloo that attends a formal nomination—speeches, demonstrations, etc.—were former President Hoover, permanent Chairman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, and Senator Capper, veteran agrarian from Kansas.

In the down-town hotels, a Taft fever was on the rise, Dewey backers were fighting to hold a formidable array of delegates calculated to give him the lead on the first ballot, the Willkie star had lost some but not all of its lustre, while the Vandenberg, Bridges, lock and how good their candidates and Gannett camps were talking dead-wood look when it came.

The Republican party was hailed by its leaders today as the "peace party," following adoption of a platform which stingingly denounces New Deal foreign policy, charges it is leading the country dangerously close to war.

Alf M. Landon, the party's 1936 nominee, endorsed the outspoken foreign plank, terming it "one that takes into consideration the realities of the situation."

"It will allow our candidate to campaign effectively in view of changing world conditions on the foreign issue—the greatest issue before the people today," the former Kansas governor added.

Both Senator Nye of North Dakota and Representative Fish of New York, leading Congressional isolationists, hailed the plank as setting up the peace versus war issue for the fall election.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—(INS)—Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania will be presented today to the Republican National Convention for the party's Presidential nomination.

Express Highway Delayed

Harrisburg, June 27—Engineers indicated today that the partly completed express highway between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh may not be opened to motorists until late in the summer, probably after Labor Day.

Adverse weather conditions continued to hamper construction of the 160-mile dream highway, pointed out Samuel W. Marshall, chief engineer of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM HIGHLIGHTS

The Republican Party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace. No foreign war. An Army and Navy so strong that no unfriendly Power can successfully attack America or its essential outposts.

National defense is vital to our existence as a Nation of free people. A free economy is necessary in war as in peace. People of the United States feel and express a sympathetic interest in all oppressed peoples everywhere who are struggling to establish or maintain their homes and their liberties.

Upon this foundation we pledge ourselves to carry out the following:

Idle men, idle capital and idle farms will be put to work to create new wealth and profits insuring stable government and greater purchasing power among all our people.

Local control of employment rests with Federal control on the basis of greatest need, thus wiping out waste and placing a larger share of the relief dollar in the hands of the man on relief. No one to go cold and hungry in America.

Increased security for the aged and a real chance and a real job for those

WHOPPING IT UP FOR THE TAFT NOMINATION

Here is a general view of the noisy demonstration in favor of Senator Robert Taft of Ohio after his name had been placed in nomination by Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade. Delegates marched up and down the aisles of Convention Hall, in Philadelphia, voicing their approval of the Taft nomination.

Lake Warren Said To Provide Fine Fishing

DOYLESTOWN, June 27—"If Bucks counties want to make a paradise for themselves let them supply many watering places," declared Warren Fretz, of this place, in an address yesterday before the Kiwanis Club of Kiwanis Club of Doylestown. He spoke particularly on Lake Warren, Bucks county's largest fresh water lake which was named after him.

Lake Warren, located in Nockamixon township, has approximately 47 acres under water and many more acres surrounding the lake. It is 9 feet deep at the deepest part and the entire bottom is of clay from 3 to 5 feet deep. The main source of water supply comes from Dobbins Spring. The lake is stocked with sunfish, catfish, large mouth bass and yellow perch and is now open for fishing. The speaker told Kiwanians that there should be some fine fishing in Lake Warren this year.

The lake and surroundings were greatly developed by the Bucks County Fish, Game and Forestry Association and by WPA contracts. Back in 1918 when the State Game Commission purchased 5000 acres in Nockamixon Township and started a game refuge, Lake Warren actually got its start.

Board of Education Assumes Initiative for Planning and Conducting Program

CAPABLE LEADERSHIP

QUAKERTOWN, June 27—The new high school Alumni field has been opened for another Summer recreation program.

This year, the Quakertown Board of Education is assuming the initiative for planning and conducting a program that had previously been started by the Education and Recreation Division of the WPA, under the sponsorship of the Board of Education.

The program of activities that will be offered, under capable leadership, will be greatly expanded in contrast to the activities offered previously. The range of activities planned for is broad enough in scope to provide recreational enjoyment for all age groups. The program will continue in effect for a period of eight weeks, beginning, as stated above, on June 25th, and continuing up to and including Wednesday, August 28th. Activities are scheduled for each day with the exception of Saturday and Sunday.

While the major phase of the program will center on Alumni field, there will be several other fields that will be utilized. Another of the high school fields, known as field No. 3, is now being used by the Community Softball League for their games. This League is a part of the general program.

A part time playground schedule is planned for a field bordering Erie avenue, adjacent to the pumping station, and owned by Robert Eichner, who granted the use of this field for the purpose of conducting Summer activities.

Misses Life's Storms But Gets Hurricane Light

(By "The Stroller")
A young Hummelville woman, one of the two single members of a "club," in jolting down her "club" for the benefit of the secret which would draw her name, decided it was unfair that others receive gifts on wedding anniversaries, and she be "enriched" out of such. So she manufactured a "wedding anniversary," giving a date in June.

A few days ago her "wedding anniversary" arrived, and she received as a gift from the secret pal, a hurricane type of light.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS
By FRANK R. KENT

Practical Politics
Philadelphia, June 26.
IT IS TRUE, as some of our most erudite publicists frankly point out, that while the world is on fire the Republican Convention here concerns itself with questions of political expediency and tries through devious compromises to attract the largest possible number of voters. Of course, that is true, but what do they expect of politicians in a political convention, anyhow?

DO THEY EXPECT that because of a world crisis they will divest themselves overnight of all small selfishness, turn into angels wearing haloes and twanging harps? Do they expect these politicians not to utilize the emergency for

Whether the fleet is moving east or west, no one in Washington but the highest officials really know. They are silent. Today, however, a source close to the Navy Department advanced the opinion that the big battle-wagons would move soon into New York harbor.

UNION NOW!

If there ever was a time when the nations of the two Americas should consult together for measures of common safety, as agreed in previous conferences, it is now. The attitude of President Vargas of Brazil, the plot to overthrow the Uruguayan government as a step toward bringing the entire South American continent under pro-Nazi control, agitation in Mexico, and finally the possibility that Hitler's conquest will include transfer of territories now belonging to the Allies make it necessary to review the situation and to decide upon methods of meeting new economic and political threats.

Even if Hitler were to live up to his disavowal of all territorial aims in this sphere, the desirability of some form of economic bloc is growing more evident every day. There is little doubt that whatever the terms imposed by Hitler he will insist on ruling Europe economically, prescribing the regulations of commerce and doling out quotas of raw materials as he sees fit. Only a Western union can possibly hope to compete, or even negotiate, with such a cartel.

Then, too, there cannot longer be delayed, without great peril, a frank understanding of what defense measures the Americas will take in concert against aggression from abroad and treachery from within. The United States especially must know on what support she can mount in maintaining the Monroe Doctrine. The visit of the cruiser Quincy to Montevideo is only a gesture, though for the moment it serves a purpose.

If it comes to fifth column revolt in one of the American states, will all the other states render assistance to the constituted government? Much of the responsibility—especially that of providing the material means of defense—rests upon the United States, but this nation would only be left holding an empty bag if there is not unanimous agreement as to what shall be done and how far nations shall go, not as individual states but as a Pan-American union.

As two continents, as yet untouched by actual contacts with the Nazi juggernaut, the Americas must combine their resources, be it for peace or for war, while there is yet time. Delay has caused the collapse of nine great European nations. There could be no more terrible object lesson than that.

Only the closest association—culturally, politically, and economically, can save for the nations of the Americas the remnants of civilization.

It seems as if this blustering business has left the one time Unspendable Turk speechless.

The National Association of Penmanship Teachers reveals that penmanship cost American business $80,000,000 last year. Imagine that! Who got it?

Who says this is not a land of opportunity when a radio quiz program pays $11 for the answer to a question like this: "What is the name of the person whose initials are C. C., who attracted the attention of a queen and is credited with discovering America?"

Pennsylvania delegation—with its 72 votes the second largest in the convention—may cast the deciding vote in the nomination of a Republican Presidential candidate.

Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio is expected to become the greatest beneficiary of such a switch with perhaps as many as 50 or 60 Pennsylvania votes being cast in his favor.

History will repeat itself if the State's vote decides the close-fought race. In 1920 the Pennsylvania leadership brought about the nomination of Warren G. Harding, after a three-way contest had deadlocked the convention. In 1928, word from Pennsylvania that its large bloc of votes would be cast for Herbert Hoover stopped the anti-Hoover drive and assured his nomination on the first ballot.

Governor James was to be placed in nomination by U. S. Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, probably late this afternoon. The Governor's name was to be presented next to last in a list of nine or ten candidates, just before that of Governor Bushfield of South Dakota.

Three seconding speeches were to follow that of Senator Davis. Andrew J. Hourigan, of Wilkes-Barre, former law partner of Governor James; Mrs. Marjorie Scranton, National Committee woman from Scranton; and Frank Hilton, of Wyomissing, president of the Young Republicans of Pennsylvania, were scheduled to speak for the Governor.

By William K. Hutchinson
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PHILADELPHIA, June 27—(INS)—While his rivals declared they have "stopped Willie," the Republican National Convention today neared its hour of balloting with Senator Robert A. Taft the favorite but with Thomas E. Dewey certain to lead on the first ballot.

The "unbossed" delegates will listen to speeches, placing five more names in nomination—after having four names presented last night—before the balloting starts late this afternoon. In all, first ballot votes will be cast for ten Republicans, four of whom forego the pleasure of hearing their own virtues extolled to the nation.

A careful survey by International News Service indicated the first ballot will result as follows:

Dewey, 322;
Taft, 240;
Wilkie, 122;
James, of Pennsylvania, 72;
Vandenberg, 60;
Martin, Massachusetts, 34;
Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, 22;
Former President Hoover, 22;
Bridges, New Hampshire, 21;
Gannett, 20;
Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, 18;
Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, 15;
Governor Harlan F. Bushfield, of South Dakota, at least 8.
The other 25 votes are classed as doubtful but scattered.

This outcome is by no means certain, except that Dewey will lead. It is based largely on what each rival headquarters has to say about the strength of the others on the first ballot.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

SYNOPSIS

Tex Aimes, happy-go-lucky, dare-devil pilot, wins the main event of the national air races in which his friend, Marvin Stone, is killed. It was a trying ordeal for the young widow, Elsie Stone, but Tex's wife, Judith, stands by to lend all possible aid. Judith wishes Tex were on hand to help, but he is celebrating with his buddies. Instead, it is Michael Dudley, young airlines general manager, who is the friend in need. He arranges for Elsie to stay at the home of his friends, the Duttons, where she will have every comfort. Judith goes with her. As Michael leaves for the fliers' banquet, Judith asks him to let Tex know where she is; but, after it is over, it is Michael who returns to ascertain how they are faring—not Tex. The latter sends a message to his wife that he will see her in the morning as they are giving him a big party that night. When Judith learns it is Sonia Winthrop, wealthy young aviatrix, who is feting Tex, she is disturbed because of recent rumors linking the woman with Tex. Lee Holt and Lem Davis, fellow aviators, come to offer their sympathies. Judith goes to the station to meet Elsie's aunt. There she runs into a friend, Hugh Lanning, a newspaper reporter.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"How's the hero this morning? Hope he feels better than I do. The top of my head's coming right off."

"I haven't seen him. The Duttons took Elsie in. Mrs. Dutton's a darling."

Hugh agreed: "Met her last night. At Sonia's shindig. She's swell. . . . And as she spoke, Hugh knew he'd said the wrong thing.

Suddenly Judith realized that she could not bear Hugh's scrutiny. His eyes were too sharp, he knew her too well. . . . Hugh saw a new shadow in her deep blue eyes. . . . So she'd finally heard the story. . . . For weeks Hugh had wondered how long it would be.

Poor kid! He felt a sudden rage at Aimes. What a fool Tex was!

Not that Lanning would admit he was in love with her. He just liked to be with her. He knew scores of pretty girls. Broadway was full of them. But to Judith he could talk, and he felt she listened to what he said. . . . She was real.

When Tex was on his southern run, Hugh took Judith to dinner. He had become a habit. He refused to admit she was becoming more and more necessary to him. . . .

As for Judith, it never occurred to her for a moment that Hugh might be in love with her. He was Tex's friend, and hers. But today he was the last person in the world she wanted to meet. Just because he knew her so well. As for Hugh, he had an uncomfortable sense of guilt. He was afraid Judith might hold it against him, that he had not warned her about Sonia. Women were queer that way.

So both of them were obviously relieved when their train was called. "See you in New York next week, Judith. Keep your chin up!" He squeezed both her hands and left.

Judith had little trouble in identifying Mrs. Royce. She turned out to be what Judith had hoped, a tower of strength. The car didn't move fast enough for Judith on the trip back to the Duttons. She was sure Tex would be there. If she could see him just for a moment, to reassure herself, to make her see how silly she was, everything would be all right.

But Aimes wasn't there. He had come, and gone on to the airport. . . . Lee reported Tex had a radio date for the afternoon, a conference with Dudley, a lot of other things.

"So that's that." Judith forced herself to turn her attention to the situation at hand. It had been twenty-four hours since she had either seen or talked with fast-flying husband.

However, she hoped to be free to go back to the hotel early to see if she could find Tex. But now there was no hope of that. Things had become more complicated.

The doctor had come, ordered Elsie back to bed, said she must stay there until the party left for Oklahoma the following day. For Elsie had made only one request: "I want to take Marvin back home."

She reiterated her request to Lem and to Lee while she waited for Judith to come back. It was not until after luncheon was served to the five of them, that they tried to make plans.

"What about Marvin's insurance?" his aunt, Mrs. Royce, asked. Lee shrugged: "No use asking about a flier's insurance. He hasn't any."

The poor woman looked horrified. These two young men were the first fliers she had ever known outside her niece's husband.

"Is flying so dangerous?" Lee grinned: "Insurance agents are just not air-minded, that's all! They don't consider us racing pilots a good risk."

"I'll take Elsie home with me—that is until her baby comes. We haven't much, but we can manage." There had been no word from Marvin's half-brother, said Judith: "Now the problem is, where are we going to get money?"

Judith had $50 with her, Lee had $75, and Lem had $35. Not enough! "The boys will just have to kick in, that's all," Lee said. Judith vetoed that idea.

"It's a waste of time. Most of them are gone. If they were here it would be simple. But you know we'd never collect. They're scattered all over."

The next thing was to find Tex. They stopped at a drug store and Judith tried the hotel without hope. Finally she rang Mr. Dudley's room, hoping Tex might be with his boss. Dudley was there.

"It's Judith Aimes, Mr. Dudley. I've got to find Tex. It's important." "Anything wrong?"

"No, only we've got to have some money. Do you know where he is?"

"He said something about seeing you can't disturb him there."

"No," Jamieson was an important airplane accessory manufacturer. "Where are you now?" he added. Judith told him. "You better come on down here. I'll have a check for you."

Judith could have cheered with joy. She went back to the boys beaming. They agreed that Dudley was certainly a "white guy." But when they reached the hotel, Lem and Lee refused to see Dudley.

"He's your husband's boss. You go on. You'll find us in the bar."

The door of Dudley's room was open when Judith came to it. He was sitting at his desk, his check book open.

"How much do you need, Judith?" he asked.

"I think $500 should be enough."

"You can have more if you want it."

He wrote the check, tore it out and handed it to her. She folded it, saying, "You're kind."

Dudley smiled. "Shall I tell you something? It wasn't so long ago I was flying racing ships myself. Now I've got an office job. I figure I got the breaks."

For the first time Judith noticed how young Dudley looked. No older than Tex. She'd hardly been conscious of him as an individual before, he seemed a kind of omnipotent power who could get things done. . . . a snappy executive.

"I figure I might be in Marvin's place today except that I was one of the lucky ones. I'm living on borrowed time. This is my way of thanking a kind fate."

Judith, listening, knew that Dudley meant what he said.

"You won't be able to get that cashed now. The banks are closed. I'll go down to the desk with you. The hotel will cash it."

So when Judith finally went to collect Lee and Lem in the bar, she had the money in hand. They went back to their round of bill paying.

It was five o'clock when the boys dropped Judith at the hotel. Judith had a sheaf of neatly receipted bills folded in her handbag.

"We'll see you and Tex tonight, Judith," Lee said as they left. "He'll need bucking up."

When Judith walked into the hotel lobby, the first person she met was Mary Hartwell. Mary was an old friend of Tex. She'd been flying for years. Judith was fond of her.

"I've been looking everywhere for you. Come on along and have tea."

Judith hesitated. She dreaded the thought of the hotel room if Tex was not there. She called on the house phone and there was no answer. So she joined Mary.

"Come on, there are some of the girls I want you to meet. They're in the cafe. We just got through with our annual meeting."

That was more than Judith had bargained for, because she didn't feel up to meeting any strangers tonight. But it was too late to protest. They were in the dining room and some of the girls at the table were already hailing Judith.

There were a couple of girls Judith did not know, including a pretty blond girl in pale blue woolsen suit across the table.

"Do you know Sonny Winthrop, Judith?" Mary was saying.

Judith managed to say something pleasant. She was suddenly conscious of looking her worst. Shiny nose. Judith's hair was straggling down under her hat. Sonny jumped into the breach with, "I'm so glad to meet you, Mrs. Aimes. I admire your husband so much." Judith felt the girls stare with acute interest.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

Once Just Spread On Bread, Preserves Now Have Host of Uses

My, The Things You Can Do With A Jar of Preserves!

Many are called and all are chosen, when preserves are in your pantry and ideas in your mind! "Way back when" we had to put up all our own preserves (and confine the selection to the fruits in local markets) we regarded the juicy jars as just something to be used to spread and butter. Now, with the commercial preserves also putting them up for us in a score or more kinds (and in such good home-recipe flavors) the bread-spread is just a spring board from which all manner of bright ideas bound.

Preserves—and their relations, jams, marmalades, conserves, and butters (the terms are often used interchangeably)—go with meat and fowl; they go into quick breads as well as onto them; they grace pie fillings and cake fillings and frostings; they produce cakes and cookies and frozen desserts; they make snacks and beverages; they make good things better! A supply of preserves in your pantry will supply you with the makings for many morsels!

Out of a Jar of Preserves

Put these ideas under your kitchen bonnet; they're worth preserving with preserves!

Add a third-cup preserves (about) and some chopped green pepper to a cup of highly seasoned French dressing for a new salad thrill. Apricot, black raspberry, currant, grape or red raspberry are good with this.

Drop a teaspoon of apricot, blueberry, cherry, gooseberry or peach preserves on top each muffin before baking.

Spread orange marmalade or red raspberry preserves over an egg or cheese omelet just before folding it.

Combine strawberry preserves and finely crumbled cooked bacon for a good snack or sandwich filling.

Serve grape jam with veal, gooseberry preserves with goose, young-berry jam with ham.

Make a refreshing fruit drink by heating together an egg white, a dash of salt and a half-cup of strawberry preserves until stiff and creamy. Add two cups of strong, unsweetened lemonade; shake with two cups finely crushed ice and serve in tall glasses.

will be as true of the Democrats in Chicago as of the Republicans in Philadelphia.

THEREFORE, these stirring appeals to the South by the Republicans here gathered are slightly absurd. Certainly, it is ineffective to scream that they must nominate Mr. Willkie in order to SAVE THE WORLD at this stage of the game. Few Democrats are converted by insistence upon his transcendent ability to deal with the great foreign and domestic problems which loom ahead. Nor are States swung by fervent pleas to abandon even the semblance of partisanship and go coalition in a big way. It would be fine if you could get the convention to nominate its best man just because he is the best man. But, let's be realistic. It never has been done. It will not be done this time and probably it never will be done.

THESE POLITICIANS—like Democratic politicians and all other politicians—are primarily concerned with winning. To win, they would not hesitate to nominate their next man either here or in Chicago next month. The way to get them to be broad and big and noble is to show them that that is the way to win; to convince them that to check short in these directions is to court defeat. It is on that basis that politicians the world over operate and no amount of pontifical political Sermons on the Mount will alter that basic fact. Quite clearly, in this situation the man who in experience and equipment best measures up to the Presidency is Mr. Hoover. If political expediency were to be abandoned the Republicans would nominate Mr. Hoover. But they will not nominate him because much as they respect and admire him they are convinced they cannot win with him.

THEY VERY BADLY want to win and the way to get them to rise to the higher levels is to convince them that only by thus rising will they win. It ought not to be that way but it is that way. Despite the confidence in the Taft camp, what is steadily nourishing the Willkie candidacy is the argument as to his ability and general enlightenment. The reason why, notwithstanding the anti-Willkie propaganda, the Willkie movement steadily gains is the simple fact that it is becoming apparent to an increasing number of Republicans that he represents the party's one chance of winning. If it cannot win with him then it cannot win with anyone. That is the really effective argument in this convention.

ONCE IT IS conceded that Mr. Hoover is not going to be named, the difficulty of the practical politicians in getting away from Willkie is obvious. With Mr. Dewey in the discard, the only alternative is Senator Taft, a capable man of high character for whom there is no popular enthusiasm whatever. The clear-headed politicians know that as a candidate, Mr. Taft, like Mr. Landon, would get the solid Republican vote. But they also realize that that is not enough—not enough by a good many million. Who then, they ask, can get the Republican vote and enough Democratic and Independent votes to win? To that there seems but one answer—Willkie. Maybe he could not get them, but if he cannot, then certainly no one can.

A REALISTIC statement of the situation will concede two political liabilities of Mr. Willkie—first, that he is a public utility executive and the Democrats undoubtedly would try to brand him as Wall Street's candidate; second, that until 1936, when he voted for Landon, he had been a Democrat. There are no other liabilities which the most diligent digging has disclosed. So far as the Wall Street allegation, its own falsity plus Mr. Willkie's ability to present fact can be counted upon to obviate that. So far as the charge that he is so recent a Republican, that answers itself. If Mr. Willkie should be nominated by the Republican party, the Republicans who voted for Mr. Hoover and Mr. Landon and who would vote for them to do—particularly if Mr. Roosevelt should be renominated.

AS FOR ASSETS, those for Mr. Willkie are listed as follows—first, the fact that he could get more Democratic votes than any other candidate; second, that he could get more Independent votes than any other; third, that he would be supported by more Democratic newspapers and periodicals than any other; fourth, that more money could be raised for him than for any other; fifth, that he has a more engaging personality than any other, that he has a greater popular appeal—as shown by the polls—and is able to make a better campaign.

THESE ARE THE things that today are being urged by the practical Willkie advocates and they are far more impressive to the men who control delegates than the eloquent, evangelical exhortations to rise above partisanship and save the world—for example, by nominating, with Mr. Willkie, Mayor LaGuardia. And, of course, the hysterical journalistic gentlemen who see among these very commonplace delegates sinister figures who are trying to "appease" Hitler in the way Chamberlain did at Munich are so completely off base as to be wholly ridiculous.

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," coming to the Ritz Theatre, is a worthy successor to the previous films of the scientific romance series. "Dr. Kil-lard's Strange Case" moves at a brisk pace, with Lionel Barrymore as the irascible Dr. Gillespie, Lew Ayres as the young impulsive Dr. Jimmy Kildare, and Laraine Day as Nurse Mary Lamont in the leading roles. The film traces the activities of Ayres, young intern assistant to Barrymore, as he takes matters into his own hands to help a surgeon friend who is in trouble over what is thought to be a bungled brain operation.
